Nineteen members and friends of the Champion Women's Institute gathered at the home of Mrs. D. D. Farmer Tuesday, the 11th, for the October meeting. There was a good deal of routine business. Christmas cards, gift cards and seals are now on hand and will be sold at the Handicraft Exhibit on Saturday, the 15th. The members decided to sponsor again the sale of poppies for Remembrance Day.

No Hallowe'en dance will be held this year, the members feeling that it would involve too much expense to bring an orchestra to town for that occasion.

Pressure of business caused Mrs. McIntyre to disappoint those gathered to hear her talk on "Beauty Hints". Mrs. R. L. Baker read a message from the A. W. L. President, Mrs. Stewart, entitled "In Search of Alberta". This gave an interesting and humorous account of Mrs. Stewart's travels throughout the province in the past two years.

The President had arranged an interesting contest on flower names. Lunch was served by Mrs. Farries and Mrs. Baker.

The annual meeting of the Alberta Wheat Pool will be held on Tuesday, October 17th. Delegates were reminded that according to the rules adopted at the last meeting, resolutions coming before the meeting must originate exclusively with the following: Wheat Pool delegates, Wheat Pool Locals, Wheat Pool district conventions and the board of directors.

COMMUNITY MOURNS O. L. TAYLOR

O. L. Taylor, well known and highly esteemed merchant of Carmangay, passed away in the Carmangay hospital at 9:15 last Friday evening, due to injuries received when his car was struck at the railway crossing, by the northbound passenger, two days previously.

Accompanied by Mrs. Peabody, with whom she had been visiting, Mrs. S. Taylor arrived home from Vancouver Friday afternoon and was with her husband when the end came. Mrs. Dona Bond, only daughter, and her husband of Gleichen were also there.

Born in Amherst, N. S., on October 18, 1879, Mr. Taylor had been 59 years old. Son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sunday, he came west to Clarendon in 1910, where he owned the Queen's hotel. Moving to Carmangay in 1910, he opened a general store, and has resided there since then, taking an interest in the welfare and development of the town and district. He was a member of the Robert Burns' Lodge A. F. and A. M., and the Shrine Club of Lethbridge.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon in the United Church, Carmangay, following a private service at the residence, and was conducted by Rev. T. Taylor, who took as his theme the imminence of death in the midst of life. Music was provided by Mrs. C. W. Folk and her daughter, Miss Mary Folk of Strathmore, who sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" at the request of the bereaved family. The congregation joined in singing "Never My God to Thee" and "Abide With Me". Interment in the family plot in the local cemetery, members of Robert Burns' Lodge A. F. and A. M., Carmangay, assisted by brothers of the order from Calgary, Lethbridge and nearby towns conducted the graveside ceremony. Brother Fred Whitmarsh officiating. Honorary pallbearers were James McNaughton, Fred Whitmarsh, H. S. Parker, E. H. Mack (Claresholm), James Davey and William Dayman and pallbearers Alf. Wynn, Sid Thompson, James L. Bowman, Roy Church, George Baldwin and D. H. Russel, twelve men who have been friends of the late Mr. Taylor for 20 or 30 years.

A floral emblem from Robert Burns' Lodge centred the pulpit, which was flanked by banks of flowers filling all the space in front of the choir stalls. It was one of the largest funerals ever held in Carmangay, the church filled to capacity and many filling the room outside. About seventy-five friends attended from points in "Southern Alberta".

More Health In Bread

The fact that the hitherto discarded embryo of the wheat kernel contains enormous nutritive value might well be used to advantage in promoting the more extensive use of the major bread cereal in this country, provided the millers can be persuaded to reform their manufacturing methods to ensure that the full value of the grain is passed on to the consuming public.

By eliminating the embryo from the milled product millers have been able to produce a flour which yields a presumably very low loaf, extremely attractive in appearance, and therefore readily saleable among the mass of the population.

Unfortunately, however, the desire to present to the public a white loaf of seeming beauty has resulted in the sacrifice of some of the wheat's most healthful ingredients and substances essential to the support of a well balanced diet.

When one considers the substantial percentage of the nation's bulk food formed by the enormous losses to the consumer represented in the rejection of its most nutritive ingredient, it is more than unfortunate. It might more properly be termed a calamity.

A Stimulant To Consumption

Doctors and dentists have known of the health value of whole wheat flour for some considerable time and every one reads of the advocacy by prominent members of the medical profession and medical writers of the use of whole wheat bread as a health measure and as a corrective for certain forms of indigestion and weakening teeth.

It is only comparatively recently, however, that the full extent of the worth of the embryo in a grain of a somewhat unusual frame has been determined by scientific and practical means as well as by the results of practical experimentation on the human constitution.

These scientific discoveries show that the embryo, or germ, of the wheat kernel is rich in vitamins A and B, E and G, all of them of great value in building up the human body and all playing their part in preserving it in a healthy condition; yet these valuable constituents, under present methods of manufacturing flour are treated as offals and thrown into the discard.

The consuming public is not yet fully awakened to the loss it is sustaining as a result of existing milling practices in that unless there is an instant demand for whole wheat flour when consumers recognize the value in terms of health represented in bread baked from flour containing the entire germ, no doubt the millers will accede to public requirement without raising any objection, and the knowledge that the bread they then get is doing much to promote the health should stimulate the public to increase its consumption of bread.

A Worthwhile Study

Commenting upon this discovery the Western Retailer in an article in its September issue printed some remarks well worthy of study when it said:

"It is high time that the Canadian Government, the milling interests and bakers joined together, to give the Canadian public the real facts about the food value of wheat. Especially is this true in view of the fact that every advance in knowledge that has been made by science in the last thirty years has tended to show that one of the richest sources of needful vitamins (which are now becoming better understood) is the embryo of the wheat kernel."

"The first baker to show the public a loaf of bread in which the full value of the embryo has been retained should receive the grateful thanks of the wheat farmer, the grain interests and every public servant whose interest is maintaining public health."

Education Needed

Those who are fortunate enough to be able to get bread baked from genuine whole wheat flour are well aware that the loaf thus produced is darker in appearance than the bread produced by "sterilized" white flour and bakers are asked to make a special effort to accept such bread when it is offered.

In other words what is required is a program of public education on the virtues of whole wheat bread as the first step towards creating the necessary demand. Should the government decide upon such a program, there is little doubt that they would receive the hearty support of the medical profession and of all those who are now aware of the health value of the wheat germ.

The economic importance of such a program should not be overlooked either, for a realization of the value of bread to health would naturally be followed by an increased consumption and bread would, in actual fact, again become the staff of life—and health.

A Conductor's Privilege

The question of whether a conductor can jump aboard his moving bus has been settled in magistrate's court at Georgetown, British Guiana. Albert Martin, a conductor, was charged under the traffic ordinance with hoarding the moving vehicle. The magistrate acquitted him, ruling the conductor had the "lawful authority" to do so.

Has Nice Little Job

Charles Smith, head keeper of the San Diego Zoo, has a neat little job on his hands—driving two giraffes from New York to California in a truck. Giraffes are regarded as the world's largest land mammals, and this is the first time a transcontinental shipment will be tried by truck. The giraffes are coming in from Africa on a freighter.

Truck Revealed Coal

One Leeds resident reaped a not little profit from England's mid-week war scare. The last five feet of a nine-foot trench Henry Varley dug to shield his family from air raids turned out to be a shovelled two tons and there was no sign the team was near exhaustion.

Collective Security

Justice In The End Is Sure To Prevail

The phrase "collective security" has come to have a bitter taste in men's mouths. Yet in the long run there is no choice between collective security and ruin for the rest of the lives and property of peaceable, non-offending men and women of the world. Fighting nations will continue to realize this truth. And it will not die. It is a far tougher organism than those who assail it and those who betray it are willing to believe. It has come out of pain and sweat and sacrifice. It has come out of the blood and hearts of men and women turning away from ease and softness to do hard tasks. It has come out of hopes and dreams of victory. It has been built on battlefield, in the sinkingships and in the narrow rooms of poverty. Those who have built it, those who now sustain it—the humble and obscure as well as the powerful—will not let it die. They are the emulsions of God, when you around them grow exceedingly small. They can be driven back and defeated for a day, a week, a year, but not forever. This is the spirit of the world, christened in men's hearts, and let them be no doubt of it—in the end it will prevail.—N.Y. Times

Cats Live In Luxury

Nothing Too Good For Six Pets Of English Woman

In a nine-room house overlooking the sea at Barton, ten miles from Bournemouth, England, six cats live in the lot of luxury.

Each is supplied, bed and bibles, and a housekeeper is employed to look after their every want. Four times a week a taxi from Bournemouth brings their food, the best steak, fish, rabbits, milk and cream.

The cats are the property of Mrs. Agnes Burrell of Bournemouth. Originally she only had one cat, but it so captivated Mrs. Burrell, a childless woman, that she became an extraordinary lover of cats that she is to-day. They are her main interest in life and nothing is too good for them.

Trans-Canada Air Lines Gives Regulations For Baggage

According to Trans-Canada Air Lines, this is what the well-dressed woman can carry with her on a flying trip without paying the extra charge for checked baggage:

21½ inches by 30½ inches by 12½ inches; two street dresses; 12 handkerchiefs; jacket; one pair dinner sandwiches; evening gown and bag; four pairs; six pair hose; lingerie; one pair stockings; 12 pairs shorts; 12 miles; nightgown; jewelry case; sewing kit, rubberized toilet kit with cosmetics in lightweight containers.

All these items, except the toiletries, weigh three pounds less than the maximum 35 pounds of baggage allowed each passenger without charge. Furthermore, they state a weight limit of 100 pounds per week with such an outfit. Men, they warn, are forever carrying too much luggage and are always a pain to air line baggage masters.

Rewarded For Kindness

Ballet Dancer And Hospital Attendant Receive Large Fortune

It's a story strange as fiction with a typical surprise ending—this true-life tale of how a former assistant theatre manager and a ballet dancer were rewarded for kindness to an eccentric old woman and received an estimated $100,000 reward.

The woman was 70-year-old Mrs. Edna Morris Allin Elliott, a quaint haunter of film houses who became famous as "New York's Champion Movie Fan".

A feminine hermit, she died friendless and alone in her three-story brownstone house in West 88th Street. Her will disclosed she had left securities and $80,000 in jewels to Rosalie Spatcher, a ballet dancer, and to William Reilly, former assistant manager of the Roxy Theatre. They had "helped to make the recent years of my life more pleasant," Mrs. Elliott wrote in her will.

Reilly, whose maiden wealth listed him as a $52-a-month hospital attendant's post, said attorneys held his estate was valued at $1,000,000.

He said when he first met Mrs. Elliott in 1927 he thought she was poor—she wore old-fashioned dresses with big, ornate buttons—and arranged for her to have a front row seat every Thursday when the theater changed its program. Afterward he would discuss the show with her briefly.

The theater closely temporal in 1932 and Reilly lost his job. He will be entitled to a pension of $1,000 a month.

She then began attending Radio City Music Hall and during rehearsals Miss Spatcher often walked over to chat with the lonely old woman. Mrs. Elliott's identity was a secret, and Elliott's lawyer was trying to see her outside the theater.

It was some time before Reilly learned of his fortune. He said he dodged Mrs. Elliott's lawyers for several days—then agreed to meet with them, trying to see him with a summons.

CHAPTER V.—Continued

The big man was surprised about with both hands in the air. Other miners attempted to halt him, but only momentarily. At last he saw Hammonton and headed for him.

"I told you it was a new Klondyke!" he shouted. "Look what I found in the mine."

He stopped his clasped hands. In each was at least a dozen nuggets, some no larger than a pinhead, others bigger than peas. Kay squealed with interest.

"Isn't it perfectly thrilling?" she asked. There was a faint, feverish glint in her eyes. Her hands trembled and clapped spasmodically. "Just to think of digging up the ground and picking out gold!"

Oliver reacted again into mad gyrations as he sat to bring up short before Mrs. Joyce and extend his treasures to her.

"Look at Mother," the girl said. "She's actually interested!"

Mrs. Joyce was asking questions and with an eager smile was turning over the nuggets in her hand in the glass paws of Olson. The big man stood there, grinning; somewhat surprised, Hammonton saw Mrs. Joyce smile quite gayly. He laughed. "That certainly is anybody's introduction!"

Kay shrugged her shoulders.

"But Mother—" she exclaimed, and did not finish the sentence. They went on their way, examining the nuggets as they went in the glass paws of Olson. The big man stood there, grinning; somewhat surprised, Hammonton saw Mrs. Joyce smile quite gayly. He laughed. "That certainly is anybody's introduction!"

Kay shrugged her shoulders.

"But, Jack, all that isn't getting me any place," she said. "I want a gold mine."

He looked at her. "Why the hurry?"

"Isn't that what a person is supposed to do, the minute you get in camp?"

Jack snarled. "You're not serious?"

"Of course I'm serious, silly. Why else should I have a gold mine?"

"A plainer claim, since you are serious," he corrected her laughingly. "But I just had the thing made for you. You mean there isn't any gold in it?"

"Of course. I hope there isn't any gold. But what's the need, Kay? There'll be enough coming out of Joe's claim and mine."

"But that wouldn't my claim, would it? I want to feel it's really mine—that I got it out of the ground."

"But you couldn't do the actual mining."

"No—" she hesitated. "Of course, I couldn't do that."

"Then I'll try to scare you up some men tomorrow. I didn't have any idea you'd actually want to work this mine."

"I'm afraid you're right, so you could say you owned a place?"

"Why shouldn't I work it?"

"Couldn't it wait until we get back from Vancouver?"

"Vancouver?" she asked.

"—and shall we be mounted here by Sergeant Terry or the Mounted Police?"

"Oh!" She pushed him playfully. "I thought for a minute you were serious!" Quickly she turned. "Oh, Mother, she cried, almost pettishly, "aren't you ever coming to see us again?"

Still smiling, Mrs. Joyce moved from the volatile Olson, and then a few feet away, raised a hand, wiggleing her fingers in an extra gesture of greeting.

"Well?" she asked, in a tone meant to contain banting, "he is Clark Gable or John Barrymore?"

"He's a very nice man," snapped Mrs. Joyce, "but I'm afraid he's not the man I want to meet in the market." Shortly after that, Kay complained of a headache and led the way back to the cottage. Hammonton returned to his work with McKenzie Joe.

It was the evening when he once more took the trail upward. This time he did not hurry. The man was thoughtful, obsessed. There was something strange about Kay, her nervousness, her quickness.

Higher he swung along the trail, at last reaching the point of landing point of land which ran out from beneath the cottage; the trail here follows the cliff almost to the veranda, where it turns sharply to the right, leading out at the edge of the steep. Suddenly it raised his head. Low voices which had come faintly from the rear of the building had shifted closer until he could hear every word.

"And I'm telling you, Mother, that I'm not going to stand for it! I won't!—I won't!"

"How are you going to help yourself?" said Hammonton. "He's gone mad with a little money."

"Well, we still want to talk about you," she countered. "About your plan."

He was silent a moment. Then: "Did I tell you I was pretty a picture down there in Seattle?"

"Did you?" Kay was thinking of you. "Everything turned out the way you wanted it to."

"Of course," she answered, with a little surprise. "Naturally we're not making a lot out of those long cruises."

"But you've got some other claims, worth a lot more."

"Yes—if we can only find the gold."

"That's what you mentioned last night."

"Yes."

"Where are they?"

"The claims? Back on the flats, away from Moose River."

"How would you go about finding gold away off like that?"

A long period of silence followed.

"I don't know how Joe will feel about me telling that," came finally.

"Kay," said the man almost abruptly. "I want to talk to you—about ourselves."

"And I want to talk to you about yourself. Why are you so nervous—so ill at ease?"

"It amazed him. "It's all news to me. Maybe I've been over-anxious—to please you."

"Perhaps that's it?" She clasped his hand with both of hers, raised his face to hers, and with a soft flush freed him. He whirled and caught her tight to him, his kisses burning her to the touch of her soft hair against his cheek. The soft hand against his forehead, as eager, roving, he beat at the creases of her smooth throat.

"I've waited so long for you," he begged. "All my life..."

"You're awfully sweet, do you know it?"

"I'm crazy about you—I know that much, with a short laugh."

"Can you say the same to me?"

And, Jack, I want you to strike it rich—richer than any other man on earth!"

He looked out over the shadowy valley. "Somewhere over there," he said throatily, "is enough gold to make us all millionaires a dozen times over." Tom and Kay—she just waiting for someone to come along and sweep it out of the grave!"

"But where?" she insisted. He ran a hand across his forehead. A long time he struggled with his promises to Tom. Then suddenly the secret fooded forth, the belief that somewhere, far in the past, Moose River had run into the ocean, had loaded itself three to deposit siltium gold, washed down from the hills by thousands of freshets and spring floods.

"But you're just telling me..."

"Yes, that's true. If the theory ever got out this camp would go crazy with gold claims."

"So I'm afraid I might be built like it?" she asked, with a queer little laugh.

"Oh, Kay! Of course not. Every time I've got it is yours—even my thoughts."

She pressed his arm.

"You're awfully sweet, do you know it?"

"I'm crazy about you—I know that much, with a short laugh."

"Can you say the same to me?"

And, Jack, I want you to strike it rich—richer than any other man on earth!"

He looked out over the shadowy valley. "Somewhere over there," he said throatily, "is enough gold to make us all millionaires a dozen times over." Tom and Kay—she just waiting for someone to come along and sweep it out of the grave!"

"But where?" she insisted. He ran a hand across his forehead. A long time he struggled with his promises to Tom. Then suddenly the secret fooded forth, the belief that somewhere, far in the past, Moose River had run into the ocean, had loaded itself three to deposit siltium gold, washed down from the hills by thousands of freshets and spring floods.

DREAM TO BE REALIZED

California Man Will Sail Around World In Small Boat

When Charles Western left Los Angeles yesterday he started on his dream of sailing around the world in a small boat. He is in conversation with his two sons, that he would like to take a trip around the world in a small boat, little did he realize that his passing remark would become an actuality.

Now for a trim little 29-foot sailing yacht is in Los Angeles harbor ready to weigh anchor on the first lap of this world cruise.

It was during the existence of the two sons, Bill, 26, a UCLA student, and Bud, 18, a recent graduate of Hollywood high school, that the elder Western finally had to make good on what he thought was merely a passing remark.

After a year of hard work, during which the two sons built the trim yacht, it was finally launched a few weeks ago. Except for laying the keel, every part of the boat was built by the two sons, who had the machine and the tools at their disposal.

During a few trips to Catalina Island, 27 miles from the mainland, the three had no previous sailing experience. Bill will act as navigator. When questioned about the nature of the trip, Bill Western remarked.

"We expect to make it a leisurely one and expect to be gone about three years. Of course, there will be many stops, but we will be watching on a trim like this, but are looking upon it as a pleasure jaunt. We have been around 200 miles west of Catalina, where we expect to meet the trade winds and sail east to the Marquesas Islands, a small group of islands in a distance of 5,300 miles. The first leg is probably the most hazardous of the entire trip."

The trim yacht is as trim as anything about the trip as his two sons. Despite the fact that he is now approaching his sixtieth birthday, he is as active as most men half his age.

Angey Wife: "The night before last you came home yesterday. Last night you came home to-day. If you come home to-morrow—tonight there's going to be a real row!"

CAN STAND PUNISHMENT

Two Old Cars Come Together, What Happens?

Believe it or not, we have never actually witnessed an automobile accident (though we have seen the aftermath of many). And we are not anxious to view such a spectacle! The other day as we drove into London at a slow pace the car ahead of us was a dark-colored sedan. And, just around another old bus we were meeting. "Now," we ejaculated, "we are going to see something."

There was a crash as the colliding cars skidded to a stop. Both drivers were out of their seats in a few seconds, but for a moment they appeared to be solidly enmeshed. Then something gave and they drew apart.

We expected to see both drivers bleeding profusely, but, no, they had each farther turned steering wheel and set off on their respective ways. Not even stopping to give each other a nasty look.

"Those old cars can stand a lot of punishment," our companion remarked. —St. Mary's Journal.

Question Is Settled

Soundsings Have Been Taken Of Saskatchewan Lake Depths

The popular question with visitors at Saskatchewan's lakeside resorts is "How deep is the water?" The answer usually given offhand but with an air of great omniscience by the residents is, "Oh, about 60 feet!" or it may vary from "up to a few hundred." No bottom has been reached." The question is settled once and for all by Hon. W. F. Kerr, Minister of Natural Resources, who has just issued a list of soundings of the various lakes enjoyed by the residents are most interesting: Last Mountain lake, 65 miles long and from one to four miles wide, is 104 feet at its deepest point, and covers 380 square miles; Lake Katchewanoo, 12 miles long and 4 miles wide, has a maximum depth of 75 feet; Madge Lake, 5 miles long by 4 miles wide, is 90 feet deep; Kenosee Lake, 48 square miles, averages 180 feet in depth; provincial waters, has an area of 3,200 square miles.

Much interest is being shown in this new venture of the Women's Institute, the Handicraft Exhibit being held in the basement of the Community Hall on Saturday afternoon, October 15, beginning at 3 o'clock. It is hoped that all the women of Champion and the district who do any kind of hand work will send in samples of their craft. The Institutes stress that the contests are open to anyone who receives mail in Champion. Entries may be left at any time with Mrs. Voisey. It is requested that all entries be in by noon on Saturday. Bring in any heirlooms you may have, too, for exhibition only, no prize.

Pieces are being offered for quilts, knitted sweaters, fine crocheted embroidery, and for individual collections of all kinds of handicraft. First prize offered in each case is $1.00, second prize 50 cents.

The draw for the Women's Institute Quilt, which is being raffled, will be made at 4:30 p.m.

Mrs. Hummel is the convenor of the committee which is serving a very delicious tea.

PERENNIAL ASTERS

Many persons are familiar with the wild asters that grow by the roadside in many parts of Canada and it is from these and other wild species that the garden varieties have been obtained. In late summer the Italian Aster, A. amellum blooms the variety King George is one of the best and has large purple flowers on stems about eighteen inches tall. Later in the season (November) comes the Italian Aster, A. amellum blooms

There are a large number of garden varieties which vary in date of bloom and in colour of flowers, states Isabella Preston, Assistant in Ornamental Plant Breeding, Division of Horticulture, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Some of the best are—Blue, Beauty of Colwall; Blue Gem and Feltham Blue; Pink, Alderman Vokes, Heather Glow and Pink Nymph; White, Mount Everest. These varieties should be divided every second year to keep them in good condition.

The New England Aster is the hardestiest and easiest to grow but the flowers are not so refined as those of the New York variety. The plants are four and five feet tall and rapidly grow into large clumps so should be divided frequently. They are very useful for the back of perennial borders as they remain colorful until late in the autumn. Ryecroft Purple has rich purple flowers and Lilac Rose is deep rose.

The new Dwarf Asters are of recent origin and are proving very useful for rock gardens as well as for the front of the perennial border. The plants cover themselves with flowers and add spots of colour to the garden just when needed. Of the ones grown in Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, the following were specially noted.

Blushing is one of the darkest and blooms late in September. Lady Henry Maddocks is pink and blooms from August to November. Victor is one of the best early varieties being a mass of lavender flowers from the beginning of September to early October. These plants do best in good loam which does not dry out. They flower well in sun or shade. Spraying with a tobacco solution is sometimes necessary in order to control aphids and a lace wing fly which are sometimes troublesome.

Mr. and Mrs. Vilas Teskey and son Bobbie attended the Carnaval in Claresholm Tuesday and are guests for a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Berlin.

Mrs. L. G. Wyckoff and little daughter returned to Seattle last Friday. Mrs. Wyckoff has been with her mother, Mrs. C. Summers, during her serious illness and convalescence.

money?

"How?" he asked.

"Lay down a seed field on your farm," I advised. "Choose five or ten acres of your very best summerfallow, and then buy only a few bushels of the best Registered or Certified seed and sow it on this small field, and let it grow in a alleyway bare all around it. Protect the field, rogue it, harvest, thresh and special bin the grain with care, and then by next year you will have enough seed for a large acreage."

"Oh," answered my friend, "that's a lot of trouble though, isn't it?" "Well," I ventured to say, "That's life all over, either we must go to extra trouble ourselves to produce an extra good thing, or pay someone else to do it for us."

TEACHING THE YOUNG IDEA

Your boy may not have exhibited any particular signs of genius but, if he is a normal youngster, he shows a healthy curiosity about things. He wants to know what is going on around him and what it means.

His teacher will tell you that his craving for knowledge is just as natural and healthy a sign as a good appetite. His brain gets as hungry for information as his body for food, and it is just as important that it should be satisfied.

Nothing you can give him will provide such a fund of interesting and varied information as a newspaper. A good newspaper is a potent stimulus to thought and development. It is the history of today, covering every field of human endeavor. You will find few teachers who do not read a newspaper. They know its value in keeping a mind alert and in tune with the times.

Give your family this important advantage. It means so much to young and inquiring minds.
